11–14 第1篇

中考英语完形填空：第一次当班级图书管理员

完形填空原文

Last month, our head teacher asked for volunteers to manage the class library. I raised my hand without 1. I love reading, and I thought this would be a great way to share books with my classmates.

The class library has about two hundred books. My main job is to 2 them in order and help classmates borrow and return books. Every Monday and Thursday afternoon, I sit at the little desk near the bookshelf and write down each borrower's name and the book title.

At first, I found it 3 to remember where each book should go. The books are organized by type: fiction, science, and history. I made a simple list and stuck it on the wall. Now I can find the right place for any book quickly.

What I enjoy most is 4 new books with classmates. When someone asks for a recommendation, I try to suggest something that matches their interests. Last week, Li Ming wanted an exciting story, so I 5 him a detective novel. He loved it and came back for another one the next day.

Sometimes books come back with small damages—a bent corner or a torn page. I have learned to 6 them carefully with tape. Our teacher said we should teach everyone to treat books with 7, so I put up a notice: "Love our books, and they will love you back!"

Being the class librarian has made me more responsible. I arrive early to open the library and stay late to make sure everything is in place. My classmates often thank me, and that makes me feel that my 8 is worthwhile. I hope our class library will grow and help more students 9 the joy of reading. After all, a good book is like a good friend—it can 10 you to new worlds and new ideas.
