中考英语完形填空：学做糖画

完形填空原文

During the school fair last Saturday, I saw a man making sugar paintings at a small booth. He melted sugar in a metal spoon and then 1 beautiful patterns on a stone board. I was fascinated and decided to learn this traditional Chinese art.

The man, Uncle Zhang, was very friendly. He said sugar painting has a 2 of over 500 years in China. People used to enjoy it during festivals and temple fairs. He agreed to teach me the basics.

First, he showed me how to melt white sugar in a small pot. The 3 had to be just right—not too high or the sugar would burn, and not too low or it wouldn't melt properly. When the sugar turned into a golden 4, it was ready to use.

Uncle Zhang picked up a metal spoon, dipped it into the melted sugar, and started drawing on the cool stone board. His hand moved 5 and smoothly. In just one minute, a beautiful phoenix appeared! I couldn't believe how 6 he was.

Then it was my turn. I tried to draw a simple butterfly. But controlling the flow of sugar was much 7 than I expected. My butterfly looked more like a cloud! Uncle Zhang laughed kindly and said, "Don't worry. I practiced for three years before I could draw 8."

He told me that the key to sugar painting is confidence and speed. You must 9 quickly because the sugar hardens fast. If you hesitate, the line will break.

Although my first sugar painting wasn't perfect, I still felt 10 because I had learned something amazing. I hope to practice more and get better at this wonderful traditional craft.
