中考英语完形填空：学做姜汁红糖水

完形填空原文

On a cold December evening, I came home from school feeling very cold. My grandmother was in the kitchen making something that smelled warm and sweet. She told me she was making ginger and brown sugar water—a traditional Chinese 1 to keep warm in winter.

I asked if I could learn how to make it. Grandmother smiled and said, "Of course!" First, she told me to wash a piece of fresh ginger and cut it into thin 2. She reminded me to be careful with the knife. Then I put the ginger slices into a small pot and added two cups of water.

Next, Grandmother told me to turn on the stove and 3 the water slowly. While waiting, she showed me how to break the brown sugar into small pieces. She said brown sugar is better for your 4 than white sugar, especially in winter. After the water started to boil, I added the brown sugar and stirred it gently with a spoon.

The kitchen was filled with a sweet and spicy smell. Grandmother said we needed to let it cook for about ten more 5. During the wait, she told me that when she was young, her mother used to make this drink for the whole family on cold nights. It was a way to show 6 and care.

Finally, the ginger brown sugar water was ready. I poured it into two cups and gave one to Grandmother. We sat together and drank it 7. The warm liquid went down my throat and I could feel my body getting warm from the 8. It was simple but very comforting.

Grandmother said, "The best food is not always the most expensive. Sometimes, the 9 things bring the most warmth." I agreed. Making ginger brown sugar water was easy, but it carried the love of 10. I will remember this recipe and this warm evening forever.
