12-03 第2篇

中考英语完形填空：学做热可可

完形填空原文

Winter is the perfect season for a cup of hot cocoa. Last Saturday, my older sister taught me how to make it at home. She said it was much 1 than the instant cocoa you buy in stores.

First, she asked me to get the ingredients: cocoa powder, milk, sugar, and a little vanilla extract. She said the 2 of a good cup of hot cocoa is using real cocoa powder instead of the pre-mixed kind. I measured two tablespoons of cocoa powder and one tablespoon of sugar, and put them into a small pot.

Then my sister told me to add a little milk to the pot and stir the mixture until it became a smooth 3. This step was important because it prevented lumps from forming. After that, I slowly poured in the rest of the milk while 4 stirring. My sister said we should heat it on low fire and never let it boil, or the milk would taste 5.

While the cocoa was warming up, my sister showed me a special trick. She added a tiny drop of vanilla extract to the pot. "This makes it taste extra 6," she explained. The whole kitchen began to smell like a chocolate shop.

When the cocoa was hot enough, I poured it into two big mugs. My sister topped hers with some small marshmallows. I tried the cocoa without anything on top first—it was rich, creamy, and not too 7. Then I added marshmallows to mine too, and watched them slowly 8 on the surface.

We sat by the window and enjoyed our hot cocoa together. Outside, the wind was blowing hard, but inside we felt warm and 9. My sister said that making hot cocoa is one of the simplest pleasures of winter.

I think she is right. Sometimes 10 does not come from big events but from small, warm moments like this.
