中考英语完形填空：学做冰糖葫芦

完形填空原文

Tanghulu, or candied fruit on a stick, is one of the most popular winter snacks in China. Last Sunday, my mother and I decided to make some at home. It was my first time, and I was very 1 to try.

First, we went to the market to buy fresh hawthorn berries. Mother said we should choose the ones that were bright red and 2 in size. We also bought some rock sugar, which is the key ingredient for the candy coating. Back at home, we washed the berries and carefully removed the 3 from each one using a small knife.

Then came the most important step—making the sugar syrup. Mother put the rock sugar into a pot with a little water and heated it on the stove. She told me to watch the sugar 4 and wait until it turned into a golden liquid. "You must not stir it too much, or it will become cloudy," she warned. I stood by the stove and watched 5.

When the syrup was ready, we had to work fast. I pushed the berries onto bamboo sticks, five on each stick. Then Mother quickly dipped each stick into the hot syrup, turning it around so that every berry was 6. We placed the coated sticks on a plate that had been lightly oiled.

Within a few minutes, the sugar coating became hard and 7. I picked up one stick and took a bite. The outside was crunchy and sweet, while the inside was soft and slightly 8. The combination of flavors was perfect.

We made about twenty sticks in total. I gave some to our neighbors, and they all said the tanghulu tasted 9. Mother was pleased and said, "Making tanghulu is not just about the snack. It is about keeping a tradition 10 and sharing happiness with others."
