完形填空原文

During the winter holiday, I decided to learn how to make glutinous rice balls (糯米糍) with my grandmother. She has been making them for over forty years and is very 1 at it.

First, we mixed glutinous rice flour with water to make the dough. I added too much water at 2 and the dough became too sticky. Grandma laughed and said, "Add a little more flour. You'll get it 3." I tried again and this time the dough was just right.

4 we made the dough into small balls and put red bean paste inside. Grandma's hands moved 5 while mine were slow and clumsy. "Practice makes perfect," she told me. I 6 her words and kept trying.

After we finished making all the balls, we steamed them for about fifteen 7. When the rice balls were ready, they looked soft and delicious. I took a bite—it was 8 sweet! Grandma was happy to see me enjoying the food.

Making糯米糍 with Grandma was not only fun but also meaningful. I learned that traditional skills need to be 9 from one generation to the next. I hope I can 10 this recipe to my children someday.
