中考英语完形填空：冬至和家人一起包汤圆

完形填空原文

The Winter Solstice is an important 1 in China. It usually falls on December 21st or 22nd. On this day, many families 2 tangyuan together. Tangyuan are small round balls made of glutinous rice flour. They 3 family reunion and happiness.

Last year, my grandmother invited us to her house for the Winter Solstice. When we arrived, she had already 4 the flour and prepared the filling. "Let's make tangyuan together!" she said with a smile. My little sister was so 5 that she couldn't wait to start.

First, we mixed the flour with warm water to make the dough. Then we took small pieces and rolled them into balls. I made mine too big at first, but Grandma 6 me patiently. "Make them smaller, dear. They will grow when we cook them." I followed her advice and soon my tangyuan looked much better.

We put a little red bean paste inside each ball. My sister tried to make a heart shape, but it looked funny. We all 7 when we saw it. The kitchen was full of laughter and warmth.

When the tangyuan were ready, Grandma cooked them in boiling water. Soon they floated to the 8, which meant they were done. We sat around the table, eating the sweet tangyuan and talking about old times. That night, I felt how 9 it was to be with family. The Winter Solstice is not just about the food—it's about the love we 10 with each other.
