参考范文

A Failure That Taught Me a Lot

Last spring, I signed up for the school English Speech Contest with great confidence. I had practised my speech many times at home and felt sure I would do well. However, what happened on stage was nothing like what I had imagined.

When I stood in front of the audience, my heart began to pound. Under the bright lights, with hundreds of eyes staring at me, my mind suddenly went blank. I opened my mouth but no words came out. After a few painful seconds, I managed to stammer through the rest of my speech, but I could tell from the judges' faces that my performance was far from good. I walked off the stage feeling ashamed and defeated.

For days, I refused to talk about it. I even thought about giving up public speaking for ever. But my English teacher came to me and said, "Every cloud has a silver lining. This failure is a gift — it shows you where you need to improve." Her words made me think. I realised that my problem was not a lack of ability but a lack of practice under real pressure. So I began practising in front of classmates and even strangers, learning to control my nerves.

Looking back, that failure was one of the best things that ever happened to me. It taught me that we do not grow from success alone — we grow through what we go through.

全文翻译

一次让我受益的失败

去年春天，我满怀信心地报名了学校的英语演讲比赛。在家我练了很多遍，觉得一定能表现得很好。然而，舞台上发生的一切和我想象的完全不同。

当我站在观众面前时，心开始砰砰跳。在明亮的灯光下，数百双眼睛盯着我，我的脑子突然一片空白。我张开嘴，却说不出话来。经过几秒钟的痛苦挣扎，我勉强结结巴巴地把演讲说完了，但从评委的表情我看得出，我的表现很差。我走下台，感到无比羞愧和沮丧。

好几天，我拒绝谈论这件事，甚至想永远放弃公开演讲。但英语老师来找我，对我说："每朵乌云都有金边。这次失败是一份礼物——它告诉你哪里还需要提高。"她的话让我深思。我意识到我的问题不是能力不足，而是在真实压力下练习不够。于是我开始在同学甚至陌生人面前练习，学会控制紧张情绪。

回过头看，那次失败是我经历过的最好的事情之一。它教会我：我们不仅从成功中成长——更在经历中成长。
