05-17 第2篇

阅读理解（议论文）

① Should middle school students use social media (社交媒体) like WeChat, Douyin or TikTok? This is a question that many parents and teachers ask. Some say yes; some say no. Let's think about both sides of the argument.

③ However, there are also strong reasons against students spending too much time on social media. One problem is that it can affect (影响) their study. Many students spend hours each day watching short videos or chatting with friends instead of doing homework or reading books. Another problem is that social media can be harmful to young people's health. Staring at a screen for too long hurts the eyes, and some students stay up late because they cannot stop scrolling (滚动浏览). What is more, not everything on social media is true or safe. Students may see information that is wrong or even meet strangers online.

④ So what is the best answer? Most experts (专家) suggest that the key is balance (平衡). Students do not have to avoid social media completely, but they should use it in a wise way. Parents and teachers can help by setting rules — for example, no phones during meal time or homework time, and limiting screen time to one or two hours a day. Students should also learn to tell the difference between real and fake (虚假的) information online.

⑤ In the end, social media is like a tool. It can be useful when we use it correctly, but it can also cause problems when we use it too much or in the wrong way. The question is not really "should students use it or not" — it is "how can they use it safely and wisely?"
