06-01 第1篇

阅读理解（说明文）

① Tea is one of the most popular drinks in the world. It has a long history of more than 5,000 years. According to a Chinese legend (传说), tea was first discovered by Emperor Shen Nong when some tea leaves fell into his boiling water. Since then, tea has become an important part of Chinese culture and daily life.

② Tea was brought to many other countries over the centuries. In the 9th century, Japanese monks (僧侣) learned about tea from China and brought it back to Japan. They developed the famous Japanese tea ceremony. In the 17th century, tea reached Europe. The British began to enjoy afternoon tea and made it a special custom. Today, people in India, Turkey, the UK and many other countries drink tea every day.

⑤ From ancient China to modern times, tea has crossed oceans and connected cultures. It reminds us that something simple can become something great when shared with others around the world.
