06-24 第2篇

阅读理解（议论文）

① Does a Good University Mean a Good Future?

② Many parents and students in China believe that going to a famous university is the only path to success. They work very hard to get into top schools like Tsinghua or Peking University. The idea that "a good university equals a good future" is deeply rooted (根植) in people's minds. But is this really true?

注释： rooted 根植的；employer 雇主；attitude 态度；worship 崇拜；guarantee 保证
