06-26 第2篇

阅读理解（议论文）

① Is Travel the Best Way to Learn?

② "Read ten thousand books and travel ten thousand miles." This old saying (俗语) is popular in many countries. It suggests that travel helps us learn about the world in a way that books cannot. But is travel really the best way to learn? Different people have different ideas.

③ Those who support travel as learning: Many people believe that travel is the best teacher. When you visit a new place, you see its culture (文化), food, and way of life with your own eyes. You meet local people and practice a new language. For example, spending a week in London can teach you more about British culture than reading many books. Travel also makes you more open-minded (思想开放的) and helps you understand that the world is full of different but equally valuable (有价值的) ways of life.

④ Those who disagree: However, not everyone can travel often. Travel costs a lot of money and time. Some students and families cannot afford (负担得起) it. Besides, we can learn a great deal from books, videos, and the Internet without leaving home. A good book about a country can also bring its history and culture to life. What matters is whether we are willing to learn — not where we learn it. Some people travel everywhere but learn nothing because they do not observe (观察) carefully or ask questions.

⑤ A balanced view: Travel can be a wonderful way to learn, but it is not the only way. Reading, watching documentaries (纪录片), and talking to people from other countries can also broaden (拓宽) our minds. The best learners use all these ways together. Whether you travel or stay at home, keep an open heart and a curious (好奇的) mind — that is the true key to learning.

注释： saying 俗语；culture 文化；open-minded 思想开放的；valuable 有价值的；afford 负担得起；observe 观察；documentary 纪录片；broaden 拓宽；curious 好奇的
