The Secret Letters in the Classroom

① It was a normal Monday morning. Emma walked into her classroom as usual and sat down at her desk. As she opened her textbook, something fell out — a small white envelope with her name written on it in neat handwriting. Emma was surprised. Who had left this here?

② She looked around the classroom. No one seemed to notice. Emma slowly opened the envelope and pulled out a note. It said: "Dear Emma, I believe you can do great things. Don't give up on your dreams. — A friend." Emma could not believe her eyes. She had been feeling worried about the upcoming exam, and this note made her feel warm and hopeful inside.

⑤ Emma was moved to tears. She had never expected that her strict but caring teacher would do something so thoughtful. From that day on, Emma not only worked harder in class but also tried to encourage others when they felt down. A simple act of kindness had changed her whole attitude towards learning.

注释： envelope 信封；encouragement 鼓励；confident 自信的；support 支持
