07-13 第2篇

阅读理解（记叙文）

① Last month, our school held an International Food Festival. Students could enter a cooking competition and share their favorite dishes. Chen Ming, a Grade 9 student from Guangdong, decided to take part. He wanted to make "Lo Mai Gai" (糯米饭) — sticky rice with chicken wrapped in lotus leaves. It was his grandmother's recipe and a dish he had eaten at home since childhood.

⑤ Later, Chen Ming said the award was not just for the food. "It was for our culture, for my grandmother, and for everyone who has passed down these recipes," he said. The experience made him proud of his roots and more confident about sharing Chinese culture.
