Express Delivery and Food Delivery: Good or Bad for Our Life?

① In recent years, express delivery (快递) and food delivery (外卖) have become a common part of daily life in China. You can get almost anything delivered to your door—clothes, books, food, and more. Many people find this very convenient. However, others worry about the effects on our health, our habits and the environment. Let us look at both sides.

② The benefits are clear. First, delivery saves us a lot of time. Instead of going to a shop or a restaurant, we can order online and wait at home. This is especially helpful when we are busy with work or study. Second, we have more choices. We can order food from restaurants far away, or buy things from online stores in other cities. Third, delivery makes life easier for the elderly and people who cannot go out easily. They can get what they need without leaving home.

③ Yet there are drawbacks. One problem is health. Food delivery often means fast food—oily, salty and high in calories. Eating too much of it can lead to weight gain and other health issues. Another problem is that we move less. When everything is delivered, we seldom walk to shops or go out for meals. A third worry is the environment. Delivery uses many boxes, bags and plastic containers, which creates a lot of waste.

④ What should we do? We do not need to give up delivery completely. It is a useful tool when we are short of time. But we should use it wisely. When ordering food, try to choose healthier options. Do not forget to exercise—walk, run or play sports regularly. When we receive packages, we can reuse or recycle the boxes. Every small action can help.

⑤ In short, express delivery and food delivery bring both convenience and challenges. The key is to enjoy the benefits while avoiding the harms. Use them when necessary, but do not let them control our life.
