08-12 第2篇

阅读理解（记叙文）

① Last summer, Zhang Ming went on a train trip to visit his grandparents. The journey was long — twelve hours — and he had brought a lot of food: sandwiches, fruit, biscuits, and two bottles of water. His mother had packed everything carefully, saying, "You might get hungry on the way."

② Around noon, Zhang Ming noticed an elderly woman sitting across from him. She was traveling alone and had not eaten anything since the train left. She looked tired and kept looking at her bag as if searching for something. Zhang Ming felt his heart sink. He remembered his grandmother's words: "When you share what you have, you receive more than you give."

③ Zhang Ming stood up and walked over to the woman. "Auntie, would you like some lunch?" he asked gently, holding out a sandwich and an apple. The woman looked surprised at first. "Oh, young man, that's very kind of you, but I don't want to trouble you." Zhang Ming smiled. "It's no trouble at all. I have plenty. Please take it."

⑤ When the train finally arrived, the woman held Zhang Ming's hand and said, "You have a kind heart. Your parents must be very proud of you." Zhang Ming felt warm inside. He had only shared a little food, but it had made a big difference. That day, he learned that a small act of kindness can bring warmth to a long journey — and to many hearts.
