12-12 第2篇

阅读理解（记叙文）

Learning to Manage My Time

①Last year, I often stayed up late to finish my homework. I felt tired every morning and could not focus in class. My grades started to drop. My mother noticed and asked me, "Why don't you plan your time better?" I did not know how. She gave me a simple notebook and said, "Write down what you need to do each day. Then decide when to do each thing."

②At first, I thought it was silly. But I decided to try. Every Sunday evening, I wrote a weekly plan. I listed all my homework, club activities, and free time. I found that I had three hours of TV time every day but only one hour for homework. No wonder I always ran out of time! I cut my TV time to one hour and gave two hours to homework. The first week was hard, but I stuck to my plan.

③After a month, I began to see changes. I finished homework before 9 p.m. and went to bed at 10. I woke up feeling fresh. My teacher said my answers in class were much better. My mother smiled when she saw my improved report card. I felt proud of myself.

④Now I still use the notebook. I have learned that good time management is not about working all the time. It is about choosing what is important and saying no to things that waste time. I also leave some time for rest and fun. Life is not just about grades; it is about balance.

⑤I want to tell other students: start with a simple plan. You do not need a fancy app or a big change. A notebook and fifteen minutes each week can make a big difference. Try it, and you might surprise yourself!
