Guide Dog Training

Guide dogs help people who are blind or have low vision move around safely. They learn to stop at curbs（路缘）, avoid obstacles, and follow commands such as "forward," "left," and "right." A well-trained guide dog can give its owner greater freedom and confidence. [1] In other words, guide dogs are highly trained companions that help blind people live more independently. Understanding how these dogs are trained helps us appreciate the bond between humans and animals and the hard work behind each successful partnership.

Not every dog can become a guide dog. [2] Puppies are chosen for their calm temperament, intelligence, and willingness to work. Breeds such as Labrador Retrievers and Golden Retrievers are often used because they are friendly, easy to train, and the right size for guiding. The puppies first live with volunteer families for about a year, where they learn basic manners and get used to everyday life—buses, shops, streets, and crowds. This early experience is important because a guide dog must feel calm in many different environments before it can start formal training.

Formal training usually lasts several months. [3] Trainers teach the dogs to walk in a straight line, stop at steps and curbs, and refuse to move when there is danger ahead—even if the owner gives a command to go. The dog learns to "intelligently disobey" when following a command would put its owner at risk. Trainers use positive methods: when the dog does well, it gets praise and treats. The dogs practise in real streets with traffic, pedestrians, and noise so they are ready for the real world. Only dogs that pass all tests are matched with an owner.

Matching a dog with its owner is a careful process. [4] The organisation considers the owner's lifestyle, walking speed, and daily routes. A fast walker might need a more energetic dog; someone who lives in a quiet area might suit a calmer one. Once matched, the owner and dog train together for a few weeks so they learn to work as a team. The owner learns the commands and how to care for the dog. After that, the pair can go home and begin their new life together. Many guide dog owners say their dogs become not just helpers but beloved family members.

[5] Guide dogs change lives by offering safety, independence, and companionship. The training of each guide dog takes time, money, and the effort of many people—from puppy raisers to professional trainers. When we see a guide dog at work, we should remember not to distract it, as it is always "on duty" when wearing its harness.

- [1] A：
  - 线索：概括导盲犬的职能与意义。空前描述"Guide dogs help people blind or low vision move around safely...stop at curbs, avoid obstacles, follow commands...well-trained can give owner greater freedom and confidence"，空后说明"guide dogs are highly trained companions that help blind people live more independently...Understanding...appreciate bond between humans and animals...hard work behind each successful partnership"。A选项"In other words, guide dogs are highly trained companions that help blind people live more independently"（换言之，导盲犬是经过严格训练的伙伴，帮助盲人更独立地生活）中"In other words"概括空前职能，"highly trained companions...live more independently"与空后"highly trained companions...live more independently"精准呼应，衔接顺畅。
- [2] B：
  - 线索：导盲犬的筛选与早期养育。空前提出"Not every dog can become a guide dog"，空后详述"Puppies chosen for calm temperament, intelligence, willingness to work...Labrador, Golden Retriever...friendly, easy to train, right size...first live with volunteer families about a year...learn basic manners, get used to everyday life—buses, shops, streets, crowds...early experience important...must feel calm in many environments before formal training"。B选项"That is because they are chosen for good temperament and intelligence, and raised in families before formal training"（那是因为它们因性情和智力被挑选出来，并在正式训练前在家庭中养育）中"That is because"解释筛选与养育，"chosen for temperament and intelligence...raised in families before formal training"与空后 chosen、volunteer families、before formal training 完美对应，逻辑紧密。

- [3] C：
  - 线索：正式训练内容与通过标准。空前提出"Formal training usually lasts several months"，空后列举"Teach walk straight, stop at steps and curbs, refuse to move when danger ahead...even if owner gives command...'intelligently disobey' when command would put owner at risk...positive methods...praise, treats...practise in real streets...traffic, pedestrians, noise...ready for real world...only pass all tests matched with owner"。C选项"In fact, the dogs learn to guide safely, disobey when necessary, and pass tests in real-world conditions"（事实上，犬只学会安全引导、在必要时违抗命令，并在真实环境中通过测试）中"In fact"强化训练要点，"guide safely, disobey when necessary, pass tests in real-world"与空后 guide、intelligently disobey、pass all tests、real streets 精准对应，衔接自然。
- [4] D：
  - 线索：配对流程及个性化考量。空前提出"Matching a dog with its owner is a careful process"，空后描述"Organisation considers owner's lifestyle, walking speed, daily routes...fast walker more energetic dog...quiet area calmer one...once matched train together few weeks...learn to work as team...owner learns commands, care...pair go home...many say dogs become beloved family members"。D选项"This process ensures that each owner is matched with a dog that fits their needs and lifestyle"（这一流程确保每位使用者都能匹配到符合其需求和生活方式的犬只）中"This process"指代空后配对流程，"matched with dog that fits needs and lifestyle"与空后 considers lifestyle、walking speed、routes 完美对应，衔接得当。
- [5] E：
  - 线索：全文收束与尊重导盲犬的呼吁。空[5]位于结尾段段首，空后总结"Guide dogs change lives...safety, independence, companionship...training takes time, money, effort...puppy raisers to trainers...see guide dog at work...remember not to distract...always on duty when wearing harness"。E选项"In short, guide dogs offer independence and companionship, and we should respect them when they are working"（简言之，导盲犬提供独立与陪伴，我们应在它们工作时尊重它们）用"In short"总结全文，"independence and companionship...respect when working"与空后"independence, companionship...not to distract...on duty"形成呼应，收束精准。
- 干扰项分析：
  - F. For example, some guide dogs are also trained to help people who use wheelchairs.：涉及导盲犬之外的辅助犬种（如协助轮椅使用者），易被误填[2]或[4]。但F以"For example"引出服务对象扩展，而空[2]讨论的是导盲犬幼犬的筛选与养育，F的"wheelchairs"与导盲犬选育焦点不同；空[4]讨论导盲犬与盲人的配对，

F的"wheelchairs"属于另一类辅助犬，与"owner's lifestyle...blind"的配对论述不符。F属"主题相关但论述层次错位"型干扰。
