阅读理解（记叙文） The Rainy Night Our Power Went Out

① It was a Tuesday evening in late May. A heavy rainstorm began at dinner time. The wind pushed the rain flat against our kitchen window, and the trees outside bent like old men. I was finishing my math homework, while Mum was washing the bowls. Just then — click — every light in our building disappeared at the same moment. We were left in thick, soft darkness, with only the sound of rain.

② My little sister Niu Niu, who is six, grabbed my arm. "Jie jie, the night has swallowed the house!" she whispered. Mum laughed gently. "Don't worry," she said. "Old Mr. Rain is only playing a little joke. Sunny, please bring the big torch from the drawer." I felt my way along the wall, found the drawer handle, and opened it. My fingers touched the cold metal torch — and, to my surprise, also three small candles and a box of matches. Mum had prepared them long before.

④ Just then, we heard a soft knock. It was our neighbour Grandma Zhou, who lives alone next door. She was holding a wet umbrella. "Child, do you also have no power?" she asked. Mum quickly opened the door wider. "Please come in, Aunt Zhou. We have candles and hot water." I pulled out a warm chair for her. We shared a small plate of peanuts and two red apples. Outside the window, thunder rolled far away. Inside, the three adults talked slowly about Shanghai thirty years ago, when power failures used to last all night.

⑤ Around nine o'clock, I suggested we play a shadow game. I made a rabbit, Mum made a butterfly, Niu Niu made something that looked like "a panda sitting on a pineapple", and Grandma Zhou made a perfect flying goose. Niu Niu laughed so hard that she slid off her chair. It turned out, I realised, that we did not need WiFi to be happy.

⑥ At ten past ten, the lights suddenly came back, bright and cold. We all blinked at each other, almost disappointed. Mum blew out the candles softly. Grandma Zhou said goodbye and walked to her own door, which was only two steps away. Before closing her door, she turned and said, "Tonight was the warmest rainy night I have had in a long, long time. Thank you." I understood her feeling. Some nights teach us more in darkness than other nights do in light.
