11-19 第2篇

阅读理解（议论文） Should Middle-School Students Still Keep a Handwritten Diary in 2027?

① At our school's "Reading Wall" outside the library, three students have, for the past four months, quietly pinned up the first sentences from their handwritten diaries. The sentences are short and almost shy: "Today the maths test was easier than I had feared." "Lunch with Grandma. Egg drop soup. The yellow leaves outside the window." "I was angry on the bus this morning. By the third stop, I forgave myself." On the same wall a typed notice has appeared, asking a sharper question: "In 2027, with phones, voice notes, and chat groups, do we really still need to write a paper diary?" My answer, after thinking carefully for a month, is yes — every middle-school student should keep a small handwritten diary, even now.

② The first reason is that handwriting and thinking are deeply connected. When we type quickly, our fingers move faster than our thoughts; the keyboard rewards speed. When we hold a pen, the speed slows down to the speed of the wrist, and our brain has time to choose. A 2019 study from Stavanger University, in Norway, showed that students who wrote by hand showed stronger brain wave patterns linked to memory and meaning than students who typed the same words. A diary, written by hand, is therefore not the same diary as a typed one — even if the words look the same in the end.

③ The second reason is a quiet kind of honesty. A typed diary, if it lives on a phone, sits next to fifty other apps. The same finger that has just scrolled through a noisy short-video feed cannot easily turn to write a quiet sentence. A paper diary, however, opens a different room — a small, slow, lamp-lit corner where no notification appears, no algorithm watches. In that room, a fourteen-year-old can be honest in a way she rarely is online. She can write "I felt small today" without worrying that anyone might "like" or screenshot it.

④ The third reason is memory across years. A typed diary depends on a server, an app version, a cloud account, and a phone that may be lost or sold. A paper diary depends on a single shoebox in your wardrobe. Many adults today still own letters from their grandparents — written in 1985, on yellowing paper, in faded blue ink. Almost no one still has the text messages they sent in 2009. The simple physical reality is: paper outlives software. The small paper diary you start in Grade 7 may travel with you to your own grandchildren.

⑤ Some will say, "But typing is faster, and we are very busy." This is true. The answer is not to write a long diary. A small daily note — three lines, five minutes — is enough. Many famous writers have done exactly this for decades. Even three lines a day, written by hand, are 1,000 short, honest pages by the time you reach Grade 9. That is your own quiet library, and no one else's.

⑥ Others worry, "My handwriting is ugly." This is also true, and not at all important. A diary is not handwriting practice; it is a private conversation with yourself. The same diary that begins in shaky Grade-7 letters slowly becomes neater by Grade 9. The diary will grow with you; you do not have to be ready before you start. Your Grade-7 self does not need beautiful pages — she needs your honest sentences.

⑦ A more serious worry is privacy. A handwritten diary, found by a sister or a parent, can hurt feelings. The answer is two small habits. First, keep the diary in one fixed place in your room, and ask your family — kindly but clearly — never to open it without your permission. In a 2024 city poll, 82% of parents said they would respect this request if asked. Second, do not write what you would never want any human to read. A diary should be honest, but it should not be a weapon — even against yourself.

⑧ What kind of paper diary works best at our age? Not too big — A6 or A5 is enough; a thick, stitched book with a simple cloth cover is friendlier than a fancy one with a tiny lock. The lock teaches you to be ashamed; the unlocked diary, kept in trust, teaches your family to respect your inner space. Cost should be small, around 15 to 30 yuan; that price is about a week of your morning milk, and the gift to yourself lasts a year.

⑨ This Friday evening, before homework, I will spend five minutes writing one new page. Today's three lines, in advance: "The sky was grey but kind. I forgot my pencil case in the dining hall — and someone returned it. I want to be that someone for a stranger this winter." In 2027, with all the bright apps in our pockets, choosing the slower, quieter option is itself a small act of courage. A handwritten diary is not a return to the past; it is a careful gift, sent forward, from the fourteen-year-old you are today to every older you who will ever exist. Send it. Five minutes. Tonight.

注释： handwritten 手写的；diary 日记；algorithm 算法；privacy 隐私；stitched 用线装订的

根据短文内容，选择最佳答案。

1. What is the writer's main opinion?

A. Middle-school students should give up writing diaries.
B. Every middle-school student should keep a small handwritten diary, even in 2027.
C. Only adults should keep diaries.
D. Diaries should be typed on phones.

2. Why does the writer say a handwritten diary is "not the same diary" as a typed one?

A. Because handwriting takes more ink.
B. Because the keyboard rewards speed and our fingers move faster than our thoughts; a pen slows the writing down to the speed of the wrist, giving the brain time to choose; a 2019 Stavanger study showed handwritten work produced stronger brain wave patterns linked to memory and meaning than typing the same words.
C. Because handwritten diaries always look prettier.
D. Because typing is forbidden.

3. According to Paragraph ④, why does the writer believe paper outlives software?

A. Because paper is fireproof.
B. Because typed diaries depend on a server, an app version, a cloud account, and a phone that may be lost or sold; a paper diary depends only on a shoebox in the wardrobe; many adults still own letters from grandparents written in 1985, but almost no one still has the text messages they sent in 2009.
C. Because cloud accounts are illegal.
D. Because shoeboxes are very strong.

4. How does the writer answer the worry "My handwriting is ugly"?

A. By saying the student must take handwriting classes first.
B. By saying a diary is not handwriting practice; it is a private conversation with oneself; handwriting will improve naturally from Grade 7 to Grade 9; the Grade-7 self does not need beautiful pages, only honest sentences.
C. By saying ugly writing means the diary will be thrown away.
D. By saying parents will laugh.

5. What does the writer mean by saying a handwritten diary is "a careful gift, sent forward"?

A. Diaries should be wrapped and given to friends.
B. A handwritten diary is not a return to the past; it is a careful gift sent forward from the 14-year-old self to every older self who will ever exist — choosing the slower, quieter option in 2027 is itself a small act of courage.
C. Diaries are sold to bookshops.
D. Diaries belong to the future government.

答案与解析

1.
【答案】B
【题型】主旨大意题

【定位】第①段末立论
【解析】核心主张直引。A、C、D 均偏。故选 B。

2.
【答案】B
【题型】细节理解题
【定位】第②段 "speed of the wrist ... Stavanger University ... brain wave patterns"
【解析】手写与思维深度直引。A、C、D 均错。故选 B。

3.
【答案】B
【题型】细节理解题
【定位】第④段对比论述
【解析】纸寿于软件直引。A、C、D 均错。故选 B。

4.
【答案】B
【题型】细节理解题
【定位】第⑥段反驳
【解析】"日记不是练字"直引。A、C、D 均错。故选 B。

5.
【答案】B
【题型】推理判断题
【定位】第⑨段结尾
【解析】"前送的礼物"主题。A、C、D 均偏离。故选 B。