Winter Library Read-Aloud Nights: "Voices in a Warm Room"
Tuesday 15 December — Thursday 17 December 2027, 18:30 — 19:45

Once a year, for three winter evenings, our library stays open after dinner and turns into a room of voices. Students, teachers, and parents who feel like it gather on the wooden floor, dim the lights, and read aloud — short poems, small story pages, favourite paragraphs — to each other. There is no prize, no judge, and no "best reader" voted at the end. The whole idea is simple: to hear how a loved passage sounds in our own throat, and to remember that reading, long before it was silent, was first a shared sound.

📚 The Three Nights — What Each Night Is For

🌙 Tue 15 Dec — Chinese Night

- Students bring one short Chinese passage (poem, essay, short story paragraph) they love.
- Each reader: ≤ 2 minutes.
- Grade 9 reads last; between readers, twenty seconds of silence, no clapping (we clap only once, together, at the very end).

🌍 Wed 16 Dec — English Night

- Any reader may bring one short English passage — poem, prose, or dialogue.
- Teachers may read too; this is not a student-only night.
- Each reader: ≤ 2 minutes.
- A small rule: read at half speed of normal speech, to help every listener follow.

❤️ Thu 17 Dec — "Letter" Night

- The warmest night of the three. Readers bring one letter: a real letter from a grandparent, a short note from a younger sibling, a postcard from an old friend — or a letter written by a famous person, found in a book (e.g. part of a letter by Lu Xun to his son).

- Each reader: ≤ 3 minutes.
- Before you begin, say one sentence: "This letter is from _____, written around _____."
- No personal information (address, phone number) is read aloud.

🕯️ How the Library Is Arranged

- Lights are dimmed to the small "reading-corner soft light."
- A low wooden stage is placed in front of the south window.
- The first three rows are cushions on the floor (Grade 7–9, about 60 seats); behind them, small chairs (about 40 seats).
- A small warm-water table stands at the back — help yourselves quietly.
- The sign at the door reads: "Phones off. Voices gentle. Ears open."

📝 How to Sign Up to Read

- On the school mini-app → Library → Read-Aloud Nights. Opens Mon 08 December 07:30; closes Fri 12 December 17:30.
- Each student may read at most once in the three nights, so that 60 different readers can take the stage.
- When you sign up, you also upload a one-line description of your passage (e.g. "Lu Xun, 'A Small Incident'") so that teachers can spot overlapping choices in advance.
- If more than 75 students apply, places are drawn by lot. No grade points or test marks are used.

🎒 What to Bring When You Read

- Your printed passage or a handwritten copy — no reading from phones, to keep the room screen-free.
- A bookmark in case you lose your line.
- A small glass of water that stays on the floor near your foot, not on the stage.
- Comfortable soft shoes.

🤫 Four Small Rules of Respect

1. Be on time. The door closes at 18:35 for the first reader. Late arrivals wait at the back until the first short break.
2. No photos during reading. A single photo of the Letter Night could turn a safe room into a less safe one. The door volunteers will politely remind anyone.

3. No "best-voice" comments — not during, not after. ("That was beautiful" is fine; "You are the best reader tonight" is not.)
4. One warm sentence only when someone seems nervous. "Take your time, we are here." Nothing else needed.

🍵 The Small Warm Moments

Between the readers, two small moments return each night:

- At 19:00, a soft bell rings; everyone closes their eyes for one minute and listens to the heating pipe in the wall. (Yes, really; it is a small, honest kind of music.)
- At 19:35, one teacher reads a short piece chosen by the previous night's students (e.g. one sentence from Tuesday's Chinese night is read in English on Wednesday). The three nights, in this way, quietly hold hands.

🙋 Volunteer Roles (24 students)

- 6 door volunteers per night (18:10–18:35).
- 4 cushion-tidiers after each night (19:45–20:00).
- 6 silent timekeepers (tap a small paper card at the 2-minute mark).
- 4 warm-water table caretakers.
- 4 closing "phone off" monitors — friendly reminders, never a finger-point.

Sign-up: outside Room 208 or on the school mini-app. Deadline Wed 10 December, 17:30.

> "A silent library is good; a library that can, for three winter evenings, hold voices gently and return them to us is better. Here, an eleven-year-old's small poem and a sixty-three-year-old's grandparent letter can sit on the same wooden stage for two minutes each. That small, fair sharing is, in its own quiet way, what literature is for."

根据通知内容，选择最佳答案。

1. When and where are the Winter Library Read-Aloud Nights held?

A. Tue 15 – Thu 17 Dec 2027, 18:30 – 19:45, in the school library.
B. Every Monday of December, at the playground.

C. Saturday 18 Dec, afternoon.
D. Three full days, from breakfast to midnight.

2. What happens on Thu 17 Dec — Letter Night?

A. Students read English novels only.
B. Readers bring one real letter (from a grandparent, sibling, or famous person) and, before reading, say "This letter is from _____, written around _____"; each reader reads ≤ 3 min; no personal information like address or phone number is read aloud.
C. Teachers read Chinese poetry only.
D. Students must recite famous speeches.

3. Which of these is one of the four "small rules of respect"?

A. Arrive after 18:35 and take the nearest seat.
B. Give every reader a detailed review.
C. No photos during reading — one photo of Letter Night could turn a safe room into a less safe one; door volunteers will politely remind anyone.
D. Shout "encore!" after each reading.

4. How are places decided if more than 75 students sign up?

A. The teachers choose the best voices.
B. Places are drawn by lot; no grade points or test marks are used.
C. Only Grade 9 students can read.
D. The library's computer scores applications.

5. What is the main idea of the closing quote from the Library & Chinese Department?

A. Libraries should always be silent.
B. A library that can, for three winter evenings, hold voices gently and return them to us is better than a merely silent one; an 11-year-old's small poem and a 63-year-old's grandparent letter can sit on the same wooden stage for two minutes each — that small, fair sharing is, in its quiet way, what literature is for.
C. Only adult writers matter.
D. Reading aloud is old-fashioned.
