中考英语完形填空：公园晨练

完形填空原文

My father has a habit of going to the park every morning for exercise. This summer, he asked me to 1 him. At first, I did not want to go. Getting up early during the holiday sounded terrible. But Dad said it would be good for my health, so I agreed to 2 it.

The first morning, my alarm went off at five thirty. I dragged myself out of bed and followed Dad to the park. When we arrived, I was surprised to see so many people already there. Some old people were doing tai chi under the trees. A group of women were dancing to 3 music. Several men were jogging along the paths.

Dad and I started with a slow jog around the lake. The air was fresh and cool, and the lake reflected the morning sunlight like a 4. I had never noticed how beautiful the park was at this hour. After jogging, Dad taught me some simple stretching exercises. "Stretching helps your body stay 5 and prevents injuries," he explained.

Over the next few days, I began to enjoy our morning routine. I felt more 6 during the day and slept better at night. I also made some new friends at the park. An old gentleman named Mr Zhao taught me how to play badminton. He was over seventy years old but still very 7. He could hit the shuttlecock so fast that I could barely return it.

One morning, it started to rain. I thought we would stay home, but Dad put on his raincoat and said, "A little rain cannot 8 us." We went to the park anyway and jogged in the light rain. It was a completely different 9 — the sound of raindrops on leaves, the smell of wet earth, and the cool breeze on our faces. It was actually wonderful.

By the end of summer, morning exercise had become a part of my life. I 10 that a simple habit can change you in ways you never expect.
