中考英语完形填空：写给老师的信

完形填空原文

The last day of junior high was a mix of happiness and sadness. We were happy because summer holiday was beginning, but we were also sad to say goodbye to our teachers. That night, I decided to write a letter to my English teacher, Ms Li. She had helped me so much over the past three years.

I sat at my desk with a piece of paper and a pen. At first, I did not know what to 1. There were so many things I wanted to say. I remembered the first day when I was too shy to speak in class. Ms Li never laughed at me. Instead, she encouraged me to try. "Every 2 starts with a small step," she said.

I wrote about how her patience had made a difference. When I made mistakes in my writing, she would point them out gently and explain how to improve. She never made me feel 3. She made me believe that I could do better. I also wrote about the fun activities in her class — the role-plays, the group discussions, and the English songs we sang together. Learning English had never been so 4 before I met her.

In the letter, I thanked her for teaching me more than just grammar and vocabulary. She taught us to be confident, to help each other, and to never 5 up when things were difficult. "These lessons will stay with me for life," I wrote.

The next morning, I went to school early to give her the letter. When she read it, her eyes became 6. She gave me a warm hug and said, "Thank you. This is the best gift I have ever received." I was glad I had written the letter. Sometimes we forget to tell the people we 7 how much they mean to us. A simple letter can express our gratitude and make someone's day.

I learned that saying thank you is important. We should not wait for a special 8 to show our appreciation. A few words of thanks can bring warmth to both the giver and the receiver. I will always be 9 to Ms Li for everything she did for me. She is not just a teacher — she is someone who helped me become a better 10.
