中考英语完形填空：端午节

完形填空原文

The Dragon Boat Festival is one of the most important traditional festivals in China. It 1 on the fifth day of the fifth month of the lunar calendar. This year, my family decided to celebrate it in a special way.

Early in the morning, my grandmother started to make zongzi. She had prepared the 2 the night before: rice, red beans, pork, and bamboo leaves. I sat beside her and watched carefully. She showed me how to fold the leaves into a cone shape and fill it with rice. "The secret is to tie them 3 so the rice won't fall out when we cook them," she said.

While the zongzi were cooking, my father told us the story of Qu Yuan. He was a great poet and minister who loved his 4. When his country was in danger, he was very sad. He jumped into the river to show his love for his country. People threw zongzi into the river to 5 the fish from eating his body. That is why we eat zongzi on this day.

In the afternoon, we went to the river to watch the dragon boat race. Many teams were ready to compete. The boats were long and 6, with dragon heads at the front. When the race started, the rowers pulled their oars together and the boats moved fast. The crowd cheered loudly. Our city's team won the race! We were all very 7.

When we got home, Grandmother's zongzi were ready. They smelled wonderful. I took a bite and the taste was even better than last year. "You are getting better at making zongzi, Grandma!" I said. She smiled and said, "Traditional festivals help us 8 our culture. I hope you will pass these customs to your children one day."

That day I learned that festivals are not just about good food. They help us remember our 9 and bring families together. I will never forget this special Dragon Boat Festival 10 with my family.
