中考英语完形填空：帮邻居修电脑

完形填空原文

Mr Wang is our neighbour. He is over sixty years old and lives alone. One afternoon, I saw him standing at his door, looking 1. I went over and asked what was wrong.

"My computer won't turn on," he said. "I need to video call my daughter who lives abroad. She is the only family I have." I could see that he was worried. I told him I would try to help. I had learned some computer 2 from my father, who works in IT.

I went into Mr Wang's house and looked at his computer. First I checked if it was plugged in. It was. Then I pressed the power button but nothing happened. I thought the 3 might be the problem. I unplugged it and plugged it in again. Still nothing.

I looked around and found a power strip. Maybe the switch was off. I pressed it and then tried the computer again. This time, the screen 4! Mr Wang's face lit up. "You are amazing!" he said. I felt proud but I told him it was just a small problem.

We sat down and I helped him open the video call software. He had forgotten his 5. I helped him reset it step by step. When his daughter's face appeared on the screen, Mr Wang was so happy that his eyes became red. "Thank you, thank you," he said to me. "Without your help, I would not have been able to 6 her today."

Before I left, I wrote down some simple 7 for him. "If the computer doesn't work, first check the power. Then try restarting it." I also told him he could call me anytime if he had problems. He smiled and said, "Young people like you make our community a better 8."

That evening, Mr Wang came to our door with a bag of fruit. "This is a small thank-you gift," he said. My parents were pleased. "Helping others is a good 9," my father said. I agreed. It feels great to use what I have learned to help someone in need. A small act of 10 can make a big difference to someone's day.
