中考英语完形填空：暑假日记

完形填空原文

At the beginning of summer, my mum gave me a notebook. "Write something in it every day," she said. "It will help you remember your holiday." I was not sure at first, but I decided to give it a 1.

The first week, I only wrote short sentences like "Went to the park today" or "Had noodles for lunch." It felt a bit 2. Then one afternoon, I had a really fun day with my cousins. We played basketball, had ice cream, and laughed a lot. When I sat down to write that evening, the words just 3 out. I filled two pages without realising it.

From then on, I began to enjoy writing my diary. I wrote about the small things that made me happy — a beautiful sunset, a kind word from a stranger, or a 4 movie I watched. I also wrote about the difficult moments, like when I argued with my friend. Putting my feelings on paper somehow made me feel 5.

One day, I looked back at my diary from the first week. I was surprised to see how much I had 6 in just a month. The things that once worried me no longer seemed so big. I could see my own growth, and that made me feel proud.

My mum was right. A diary is not just a record of events — it is a friend that 7 to you without judging. It helps us understand ourselves better. Now I keep the notebook by my bed and write before I sleep. It has become part of my 8.

I plan to keep this habit even when school starts again. Maybe when I am 9, I can read these pages and remember the happy days of my youth. What a wonderful 10 that will be!
