中考英语完形填空：第一次做演讲

完形填空原文

Last term, our English teacher told us that everyone had to give a speech in front of the class. When I heard this, my heart sank. I was one of the 1 students in the class and hated speaking in public.

I had two weeks to prepare. The topic I chose was "My Favourite Season." I picked spring because it was easy to talk about — flowers, warm weather, and new beginnings. I wrote my speech carefully, making sure every sentence was 2 and easy to understand.

After writing it, I practised reading it aloud at home. At first, I spoke too fast and my voice was shaky. My mother sat in the living room and listened. "Slow down," she said, "and look up from your paper sometimes. 3 contact makes your speech more powerful." I followed her advice and practised again and again.

The night before the speech, I could hardly 4. I kept imagining all the things that could go wrong: What if I forgot my words? What if everyone laughed at me? I told my father about my fears. He said, "Everyone feels nervous before speaking in public. The 5 is that you have prepared well. Trust yourself."

The next morning, I walked into the classroom with my speech in my hand. My palms were sweating. When the teacher called my name, I stood up slowly and walked to the front. I took a deep 6 and began.

The first few sentences were the hardest. My voice trembled a little. But as I continued, I began to feel more comfortable. I remembered my mother's advice and looked at my classmates. Some of them were nodding and smiling, which gave me 7. By the end, I was speaking naturally, almost as if I were just talking to friends.

When I finished, the class clapped. My teacher said I did a good job and praised my clear pronunciation. I walked back to my seat feeling 8 than I had ever felt before.

That experience taught me something valuable: the things we fear most are often not as 9 as we imagine. If we prepare well and face our fears bravely, we can surprise ourselves. Now, I am not afraid of public speaking any more. In fact, I have even started to 10 it.
