中考英语完形填空：学滑冰

完形填空原文

During the winter holiday, my parents took me to an ice rink. I had never tried ice skating before. I was both excited and a little 1. What if I fell and hurt myself?

We rented a pair of ice skates. When I put them on and stood up, my legs felt shaky. The blades were very thin, and I could not 2 my balance. I held onto the wall and took small steps. Other skaters glided past me smoothly. I wished I could skate like them.

My father used to skate when he was young. He came to help me. "Bend your knees a little," he said. "Keep your weight forward. And don't look down — look ahead." I tried to 3 his advice. I let go of the wall and pushed one foot forward. For a moment, I was moving! But then I lost my balance and fell. My bottom hit the ice. It was cold and a bit 4, but I was not seriously hurt. I got up and tried again.

Falling became part of my learning. I fell many times that afternoon. Each time I fell, I learned something. I learned to keep my arms out for balance. I learned to bend my knees more. I learned not to be 5 of falling — it was the only way to improve.

By the end of the first hour, I could skate a short distance without holding the wall. I was still slow and unsteady, but I was making 6. My mother cheered from the side. "You're doing great!" she said. Her encouragement meant a lot to me.

We went back to the ice rink two more times that week. Each visit, I improved a little. On the third visit, I could skate around the rink once without falling. I felt so 7! My father said, "Remember how nervous you were on the first day? Now look at you. Practice really does make perfect."

Ice skating taught me that new skills take time to learn. We should not 8 ourselves when we make mistakes. Every expert was once a beginner. The important thing is to keep trying and never give up. I hope to improve my skating this winter and perhaps try 9 sports like skiing in the future. Learning something new is always 10, even when it is challenging at first.
