中考英语完形填空：学唱英文歌

完形填空原文

Our English teacher, Miss Li, suggested that we learn an English song to improve our pronunciation. She said that singing could help us remember words and practise our 1. The whole class thought it was a great idea.

We chose a popular song that was not too difficult. The lyrics were clear, and the melody was catchy. Miss Li played the song once, and we listened carefully. Then she wrote the lyrics on the blackboard. We read them 2 to make sure we understood every word.

The first step was to learn the melody. We hummed along without singing the words. It helped us get familiar with the tune. Some of us were a bit shy at first. We were afraid of singing 3 in front of others. But Miss Li said, "Everyone can sing. There is no right or wrong. Just enjoy the music."

We practised the chorus first because it was the easiest part. We sang it together again and again. Gradually, our voices began to blend. The feeling of singing in harmony was 4. I had never realised that group singing could sound so good.

Then we learned the verses. They had more words and required better pronunciation. Miss Li corrected us when we mispronounced words. "Pay attention to the 'th' sound," she said. "And the 'r' and 'l' are different in English." We practised those sounds 5 until we got them right.

After two weeks of practice, we could sing the whole song. Miss Li recorded us and played it back. We were surprised to hear how we sounded. It was not perfect, but we had improved a lot. We felt 6 of ourselves.

We performed the song at the school arts festival. Our parents came to watch. When we finished, the audience clapped warmly. My mother said she could understand most of the words. That was the best 7 we could get — our English was clear enough for others to understand.

Since then, I have developed a habit of learning English through songs. I listen to English songs when I do homework or travel by bus. I look up the lyrics if I do not understand them. Singing has become a fun way to 8 my English.

I recommend this 10 to my friends. Learning through music is more enjoyable than memorising word lists. The melodies help us remember the words, and the positive feelings make the experience 9. I hope more students will discover the joy of learning English through songs.
