中考英语完形填空：参加朗诵比赛

完形填空原文

Last month, our school held an English recitation competition. I had always enjoyed reading poems and stories aloud, so I decided to take part. My English teacher helped me choose a suitable piece — a short poem about nature.

I practised every day for two weeks. I read the poem again and again until I could recite it from 1. I also paid attention to my intonation and pauses. A good recitation is not just about saying the words correctly; it is about expressing the 2 behind them.

The day of the competition arrived. I put on my best clothes and went to the school hall. There were about twenty participants. We drew lots to decide the order of performance. I got number twelve — right in the 3. I was neither first nor last, which made me feel a bit more relaxed.

As I watched the other participants, I learned from them. Some spoke too quickly; others were too quiet. I reminded myself to speak clearly and at a steady 4. When my turn came, I took a deep breath and walked onto the stage.

The lights were bright, and I could see the judges sitting in the front row. I felt a moment of 5, but then I remembered my teacher's words: "Imagine you are sharing the poem with a friend." I began to recite. My voice was steady, and I tried to put emotion into every line.

When I finished, the hall was silent for a second. Then the audience burst into applause. I felt a wave of 6. I had done my best, and that was what mattered. The judges wrote on their papers. I could not see their expressions, but I hoped for the best.

We had to wait until the end to hear the results. All the participants sat together. Some looked confident; others looked nervous. The host announced the names of the winners. When I heard my name for the third prize, I could not 7 my ears. I had won! I walked onto the stage to receive my certificate. My teacher was smiling in the audience.

The certificate is now on my bedroom wall. It reminds me that hard work pays off. I used to be shy about speaking in front of people. This competition helped me overcome my 8 and build confidence. I am grateful for the experience.

I will take part in the competition again next year. Next time, I might choose a longer piece or try a different style. Recitation has become one of my favourite 9. It combines language learning with artistic expression. I encourage my classmates to try it too. Everyone has a voice worth 10.
