中考英语完形填空：学做三明治

完形填空原文

Last Saturday morning, my mother was busy with housework, so she asked me to make lunch for myself. I had never cooked before, but I decided to try making a sandwich. It seemed simple 1.

I opened the fridge and took out bread, eggs, vegetables, and butter. First, I heated the frying pan and broke two eggs into it. I had to be 2 not to break the yolks. Then I sprinkled a little salt on the eggs. When they were cooked, I put them on a plate.

Next, I spread some butter on two 3 of bread. I placed lettuce and tomato slices on one piece, then added the eggs. I put the other piece on top and pressed gently. The sandwich looked good, but when I took a bite, I found it was too 4. I had forgotten to add any flavouring!

I went back to the kitchen and tried again. This time I added a little mayonnaise and a pinch of salt. The second sandwich tasted much 5. My mother came in and smiled when she saw my creation. "Well done! You learned something new today," she said.

From that day on, I have made sandwiches several times. Each time I try different 6, like cheese or ham. I also learned that cooking needs practice. The first try might not be perfect, but if we keep 7, we will get better.

Making my own food gives me a sense of 8. I feel proud when I can prepare a simple meal. My little brother often asks me to make sandwiches for him too. Maybe one day I will learn to cook more 9 dishes, but for now, I am happy with my sandwiches. As the saying goes, "Practice makes 10."
