中考英语完形填空：帮妹妹辅导功课

完形填空原文

My younger sister is in primary school. She often has difficulty with her maths homework. Last month, my mother asked me to help her. "You are good at maths," she said. "Can you spend some time 1 your sister?" I agreed, though I was not sure if I could be a good teacher.

The first evening, my sister showed me her maths book. The topic was fractions. I had learned it years ago, but I had to 2 the rules before I could explain them. I found my old notebooks and reviewed quickly. Then I sat down with my sister and started to teach.

I tried to explain in a simple way. Instead of using difficult words, I used examples from daily life. For example, I said, "If you cut an apple into four equal parts and eat one, you have eaten one 3." My sister nodded and seemed to understand. But when I gave her a similar problem, she made mistakes again. I felt a little 4, but I told myself to be patient.

I learned that my sister needed more practice. I made some extra exercises for her and checked her answers every day. When she got a problem 5, I would praise her. When she was wrong, I would explain the steps again slowly. Gradually, her test scores improved. She got 85 points on the last maths test, up from 70 before. I was so happy for her.

Helping my sister also helped me. Going over primary school maths 6 my own knowledge. I understood the topics more deeply when I had to teach them. My sister and I also became 7. We used to argue about silly things, but now we work together and respect each other more.

My mother said that teaching is the best way to learn. I think she is 8. When you explain something to others, you have to organise your thoughts clearly. That process makes you learn better. I will 9 helping my sister until she no longer needs it. Maybe one day she will help someone else too. That is how knowledge gets 10.
