中考英语完形填空：参加剪纸兴趣班

完形填空原文

Last term, our school started a paper-cutting club. I had always admired Chinese paper-cutting art and decided to join. The teacher was a kind grandmother who had been cutting paper for forty years. She said, "Paper-cutting is not difficult. What you need is a pair of scissors, some red paper, and a little 1."

In the first lesson, we learned to cut simple shapes: circles, hearts, and flowers. I thought it would be easy, but my hands did not listen to me. My circles looked like ovals, and my flowers had uneven petals. The teacher smiled and said, "Don't 2. Everyone starts this way. Your hands will learn with practice."

We folded the paper before cutting. Folding helped us make 3 patterns. A piece of paper folded twice could make a four-petaled flower; folded more times, it could make a snowflake. The teacher showed us how to draw the outline first with a pencil, then cut along the lines. "Never cut without drawing first," she said. "One wrong cut can 4 the whole piece."

After a month, I could cut simple patterns quite well. The teacher then taught us the traditional "double happiness" character often used at weddings. It was more complex. I had to cut very carefully around the thin lines. My first attempt broke in two places. I felt 5, but the teacher said, "Paper is cheap. Try again." She was right. On my third try, I made a complete "double happiness" that my parents proudly displayed on our wall.

Before the Spring Festival, our club held an exhibition. We displayed our best work in the school hall. Many students and parents came to see. I had made a paper-cutting of a rabbit for the Year of the Rabbit. Someone asked if they could 6 it. I felt so honoured. The teacher said that paper-cutting was a gift that could be shared. "When you give your work to others, you share not just paper but culture and 7," she said.

The paper-cutting club has become my favourite after-school activity. I find it relaxing to focus on the scissors and paper. In this busy world, we need activities that help us 8. Paper-cutting does that. I also learned to appreciate traditional art more. Our ancestors created beautiful things with simple tools. We should not let these 9 disappear. I will keep practising and perhaps one day teach others too. As the teacher said, the best way to learn is to 10.
