Then we divided the work: I would write the main 3 and draw some pictures, while Li Ming would design the layout and add the border.

I spent two evenings writing the article. I had to 4 my words carefully because the space on the newspaper was limited. Li Ming was good at art, so his part looked really 5. He used different colors and made the title stand out.

On the day before the deadline, we 6 our work together. At first, something looked a bit wrong — the pictures and words didn't match well. We didn't give up. We moved things around and made a few 7. After three hours of hard work, our hand-copy newspaper was finally complete.

When we handed it in, our teacher said we had done a 8 job. She especially liked our creative ideas. A week later, we heard the good news — we won the first prize! We were so happy that we 9 hands and jumped for joy.

This experience taught me that teamwork makes difficult tasks easier. When we 10 our strengths, we can achieve amazing things together.
