中考英语完形填空：学骑独轮车

完形填空原文

During the summer, I saw a boy riding a unicycle in the park. He moved smoothly and gracefully, as if he were dancing on one wheel. I was deeply 1 and decided that I wanted to learn too.

I told my father about my idea, and he was supportive. He found a second-hand unicycle online and bought it for me. When it arrived, I was thrilled. But as soon as I tried to sit on it, I realised how 2 it would be. The unicycle had no handlebars — there was nothing to hold onto. I fell off within two seconds.

My father held my arm and helped me balance. "Take it slowly," he said. "Learning to ride a unicycle takes time and 3." I nodded and climbed back on. That first afternoon, I must have fallen at least fifty times. My arms and legs were covered with bruises. But I refused to 4.

Every evening after homework, I practised in our neighbourhood. At first, I needed to hold the wall for support. I would push off, pedal a few times and then 5 off. Gradually, I was able to ride a little further each day. After one week, I could go about ten metres without any support.

The hardest part was learning to turn. On a bicycle, you can steer with the handlebars. But on a unicycle, you have to shift your 6 and twist your hips. It felt very unnatural at first. I kept falling whenever I tried to change direction. A kind old man who watched me practise every day said, "Don't think too much. Let your body feel the 7."

After three weeks, something amazing happened. I suddenly found my balance. Riding the unicycle felt as 8 as walking. I could go straight, turn left and right, and even ride backwards a little. My father recorded a video of me and sent it to our relatives. They were all very impressed.

Some of my classmates asked me to teach them. I agreed and found that teaching was almost as 9 as learning. Watching their excited faces when they managed a few pedals made me very happy.

Learning to ride a unicycle taught me that nothing is impossible if you are willing to put in the effort. Every expert was once a beginner. The key is to keep trying, even when you 10 down.
