中考英语完形填空：帮妈妈整理旧衣物

完形填空原文

Last Sunday afternoon, my mother asked me to help her tidy up the old clothes in the wardrobe. She said we had too many clothes that we no longer wore, and it was time to 1 out what to keep and what to give away.

I agreed and we started working together. Mom pulled out all the clothes from the wardrobe and put them on the bed. There were coats, sweaters, dresses, and many other items. Some of them were still in good 2, but we had outgrown them or they were out of style.

"These clothes can still be useful to someone else," my mother said. "We can donate them to people who need them." I thought it was a good idea. Helping others while tidying up our home made the work more 3.

We sorted the clothes into three piles: one to keep, one to donate, and one to throw away. The clothes that were torn or too worn could not be donated. We put them in a bag for recycling. My mother said that even old clothes could be 4 in some way, so we shouldn't just throw them in the rubbish.

While we were sorting, I found a small dress that I had worn when I was five. It had a cute pattern of little flowers. I showed it to my mother. She smiled and said, "You loved this dress. You wore it 5 when you were little." We decided to keep it as a memory. Some things are worth keeping not for use, but for the 6 they bring.

After two hours of work, we had finished. The wardrobe looked much neater. We had two big bags of clothes ready to donate. My mother would take them to a charity shop the next day. I felt proud that we had done something good. Donating clothes is a simple way to 7 others and protect the environment at the same time.

From this experience, I learned that we should not hold on to things we don't need. Sharing with others can bring 8 to both the giver and the receiver. I will help my mother with housework more often from now on. A tidy home and a helpful heart make life more 9. Next time we tidy up, I will 10 to find more things to share with those in need.
