中考英语完形填空：学做豆腐脑

完形填空原文

Last weekend, my grandma said she would teach me how to make douhua, or tofu pudding. I had eaten it many times but never 1 how it was made. I was curious and couldn't wait to learn.

First, Grandma soaked some dried soybeans in water overnight. The next morning, she put them in a blender and added some water. She turned on the machine and the beans turned into a white 2. Then we poured the liquid through a cloth to remove the bean pulp. What was left was called soy milk.

Grandma heated the soy milk in a pot. When it was warm, she added a special 3 called gypsum. "This is the key step," she said. "We need to stir it slowly and then wait." I watched carefully. After about fifteen minutes, the soy milk 4 into something soft and smooth — that was douhua!

We let it cool down a little. Grandma taught me how to add sugar syrup and some toppings. I chose to put some red beans and a little honey on 5. The first spoonful tasted amazing! It was soft, sweet and had a special smell of soybeans.

Grandma said douhua was a traditional Chinese food. People had been making it for hundreds of years. She 6 me that making food by hand takes time and patience, but the result is worth it. I agreed. This experience made me 7 that even simple food needs careful steps to turn out well. I want to learn more from Grandma and maybe 8 this skill to my friends someday. Cooking with family can be so much 9 than just eating ready-made food. I will always 10 this sweet lesson from my grandma.
