参考范文

Last term, I entered the school English spelling bee with high confidence. I had practised for weeks and felt sure I would win.

In the first three rounds, I did well and answered every word correctly. But in the final round, the judge gave me the word "necessary". My mind went blank. I spelled it as "n–e–c–e–s–s–e–r–y" and was eliminated immediately. I stood there, frozen, while the audience clapped for the next contestant.

After the competition, I felt embarrassed and upset. I kept blaming myself — how could I miss such a common word? But after a few days, I calmed down and realised something important: failure is not the end; it is feedback.

Now I keep a "mistake notebook" where I write down every word I get wrong. That one painful moment has made me a more careful and humble learner. Sometimes you have to lose a battle to win the war.

全文翻译

上学期，我满怀信心地参加了学校英语拼写大赛。我练习了好几个星期，觉得自己一定会赢。

前三轮我表现很好，每个单词都拼对了。但在最后一轮，评委给了我"necessary"这个词。我大脑一片空白。我拼成了"n-e-c-e-s-s-e-r-y"，立刻被淘汰了。我站在那里，呆住了，观众为下一位选手鼓掌。

比赛结束后，我觉得很丢脸、很难过。我不停地责怪自己——我怎么会拼错这么常见的词？但几天后，我冷静下来，意识到了一个重要的道理：失败不是终点，而是反馈。

现在我有一个"错误本"，每个拼错的词我都会记下来。那个痛苦的瞬间让我成为了一个更细心、更谦逊的学习者。有时候你必须输掉一场战斗，才能赢得整场战争。
