The teacher prepared clay, a pottery wheel, and some simple tools 3 us. She first demonstrated how to center the clay on the wheel. It looked easy, 4 when I tried, the clay kept flying off.

"Don't press too hard. Let your hands move 5 with the wheel," the teacher advised. After several 6, I finally managed to keep the clay in place. Then I slowly shaped it into a small bowl.

The bowl was not 7 perfect — one side was a bit higher than the other. But the teacher said that was what made handmade things 8. "No two pieces are exactly alike," she smiled.

We left our bowls to dry for a week. 9 they were dry enough, the teacher helped us glaze and fire them in a kiln. When I held the finished bowl in my hands, it felt 10 heavier than before. I decided to give it to my mother as a present.
