When my name was called, I walked to the front of the class. My legs felt like they were made of jelly. I looked at my classmates and saw their encouraging 6. That gave me a little courage.

I started speaking. At first, my voice was too low for anyone 7. The teacher reminded me gently to speak up. I took a breath and raised my voice. As I talked about my dream of becoming a doctor, I gradually forgot my fear.
