中考英语完形填空：帮同学辅导功课

完形填空原文

My classmate, Zhang Fang, has always been weak in English. One day, she came to me and asked 1 I could help her with grammar. I agreed without hesitation.

We started meeting in the school library every Thursday after class. I prepared some exercises and explained the grammar rules 2 simple words. Zhang Fang was a slow learner, but she was very hardworking. She never gave 3 even when she made mistakes.

The first topic I taught her was the present perfect tense. She found it 4 to understand the difference between "have done" and "did." I used real-life examples to explain. "Have you ever been to Beijing?" means the experience matters, not 5 you went there.

After three weeks of practice, Zhang Fang could use the present perfect tense 6. She was so happy that she bought me a small gift — a notebook with a cute cat on the cover.

What surprised me was that helping her also improved 7 own English. When I explained grammar rules to her, I had to think more 8 about them. This made my understanding much deeper.

Our English teacher noticed Zhang Fang's 9 and praised her in front of the class. She thanked me publicly, which made me feel a little embarrassed but 10 proud. I realized that helping others is the best way to help ourselves.
