完形填空原文

Grass weaving is one of the oldest crafts in China. Last week, our school invited a village artisan, Grandma Liu, to teach us 1 art.

Grandma Liu was over seventy years old, but her fingers were still amazingly 2. She brought bundles of dried rice straw and palm leaves. "Nature gives us the best materials," she said 3 a warm smile.

She began by showing us how to weave a small grasshopper. Her hands moved so 4 that we could barely follow. She twisted, folded, and tied the straw, and within two minutes, a lifelike grasshopper sat on her palm.

"Now it's your turn," she said. She handed 5 of us several pieces of straw and guided us step by step. The straw was harder to bend than I 6. My fingers hurt after just a few tries.

I was about to give up when Grandma Liu sat down beside me. She held my hands and moved them gently. "Feel the straw," she whispered. "It will tell you 7 it wants to go." With her help, I finally made a simple dragonfly.

8 it was far from perfect, I was proud of my first grass-weaving work. Grandma Liu told us that fewer and fewer young people were learning this craft. She hoped we could help keep it 9.

I promised myself that I 10 practice more and learn this beautiful art. Grandma Liu's patience and love for her craft deeply inspired me.
